Which of the following best describes the concept of employee voice in the workplace?

Options :

6406531887400. ✖ Employee voice is a tool for management to identify underperforming employees and take corrective action. It involves listening to employees' complaints and suggestions to identify areas where employees are not meeting the organization's expectations and taking action to correct the behaviour.

6406531887401. ✖ Employee voice is a communication process that involves only top-down communication from management to employees. It is a one-way communication process where management provides information to employees without soliciting feedback or opinions.

6406531887402. ✔ Employee voice is a process of allowing employees to express their opinions, feedback, and concerns in the workplace. It involves creating a communication culture that encourages open dialogue and collaboration between employees and management, leading to higher levels of employee engagement, job satisfaction, and organizational performance.

6406531887403. ✖ Employee voice is a mechanism for employers to control employee behaviour and enforce compliance with company policies. It involves giving employees a platform to voice their opinions and concerns but only if they align with the company's goals and objectives.

A team of administrators at a major university just made a bad decision about which new building project to approve. The top two choices were a new lecture hall or a new technology support facility. The team decided in favour of the new lecture hall. Their reasoning was that enrollments at the university have steadily increased over the years and they anticipate running out of lecture hall space in the near future. Plus, the current tech support facility has been adequate to meet the university's previous technology needs. What they failed to consider, however, was a huge increase in online education in the near future, which means less lecture hall space will be used to teach classes but more technology support will be necessary.

Which of the following principles of Engineering Sense did the team FAIL to apply when they made a decision?

1. Framing
2. Applying the principles learnt
3. Estimation
